For those who like all kinds of stories, this 8 story collection includes a wide range of genres.

In "Dead Faces in the Rain", an FBI agent hunts down his twin brother, who has committed the most heinous crime the agent has ever seen.

In "Music of Dancing Raindrops", a bearded man tells a young man he just met about the most beautiful music he ever heard in his life. He can remember it so vividly, but to describe it is another matter.

In "Perfectly Wilted", A homeless man is forced to reevaluate his life when some punk kids bully him out of town.

In "Lake Screamer", a detective investigates the origins of a mysterious scream by the lake. He finds an abandoned journal, and the more he reads, the more questions he has about could have possibly caused the chilling screams in the night.

In "The Man in the Black Box", Zairo finds himself in strange places he can't understand, with people he can't recall. He has no idea who he is, where he's been, or where he's going. Meanwhile, his wife is trying to get through to him, to get him to come back to reality.

In "Nine Storey Mission", Blake has one thing and one thing only that he wants to do, and it is on top of a nine storey high building.

In "The Undecipherable Language of the Ocean", Diego comes to the beach to get away from his troubled past, but while he is there alone, he sees someone in terrible danger.

In "Alien-Like Humans", Leon makes a group of friends under strange circumstances. He doesn't really know them, and they don't really know him.
