The American Scholar: An Address (Classic Reprint) Ralph Waldo Emerson

President and GenTLEMEN :I greet you on I the recommencement of i our literary year. Our anniversary is one of hope, and, perhaps, not enough of labor. We do not meet for games of strength or skill, for the recitation of histories, tragedies, and odes, like the ancient Greeks; for parliaments of love and poesy, like the Troubadours; nor for the advancement of science, like our contemporaries in the British and European capitals. Thus far, our holiday has been simply a friendly sign of the survival of the love of letters amongst a people too busy to give to letters any more. As such, it is precious as the sign of an indestructible instinct. (Typographical errors above are due to OCR software and don't occur in the book.)
